Events Leading Up to The Surrender Here

Important to recall events leading up to the Surrender here at Appomattox, that stages of the war found the mighty armies of the North moving ever closer and closer to Richmond, Southern Spirit, undimmed bravely met every threat. But the all important necessity of supplies and reinforcements began to take their toll. The flush of Manassas was hushed in the still of Gettysburg, and the exultation of Chancellorsville was sobered in the tragedy of Vicksburg. The glamor of young heroes marching off to war, was wearied by the dragging years of privation. Then Richmond, fair city of the Confederacy fell, and was burned. Slowly the web of Grant's powerful army entwined the remnants of Lee's once all conquering heroes in gray. Petersburg was ravaged. Moving westward, from the ruins of Richmond, Lee's army of less than 20,000 men followed the James River. Grant's army was equipped to move more swiftly.

REPORTER-PHOTOGRAPHERS, hundreds of them, constantly scout the world for "shots" that will make a news highlight more real... more interesting... more understandable. The single, business-like click of a camera and a thousand-word story is captured, all in an instant, to be presented in a manner more graphic than the words themselves could ever attain.

The scenes these men photograph number into the thousands daily. From this great number a careful selection is made. The chosen pictures, designed to aid you in the visualization of important news events or "human-interest" occurrences and individuals, are regularly offered by this newspaper.

This is our answer to a modern public's demand upon a modern newspaper for pictures of places, persons and incidents of world-wide interest.

Lee hoped to reach Lynchburg, and then make a dash to unite with other Southern forces coming up from the Carolinas and Tennessee. Then they might be able to make another stand. On the westward march some desultory fighting took place. Then Lee approached Appomattox and found that Grant's army had gotten in between him and his first goal of Lynchburg. That meant two things: either he would have to fight his way through with the odds overwhelmingly against him, or else end the struggle, provided suitable terms could be arranged.

Old Tavern

Baby's Foot Print in Brick Of Tavern, Lastest Fireplace In County

The tavern at the Old Court House was quite a gathering place in ante bellum days, and will be a feature of the Restoration. It was a regular stop for the stage coach line from Richmond to Bristol. Nearby was a small bar. The tavern, made of brick still stands. The bricks are said to have been made here. Near the front door today, you can see a baby's foot print in one of the bricks, made therein when the brick was still soft.

In one of the outbuildings to the rear of the tavern still stands what is undoubtedly the largest fireplace in Appomattox county. It measures nearly eight feet across. When the village is restored, who knows but what that fireplace will be refitted with hooks and pots and they'll cook in it again.

What's What Who's Who in WASHINGTON

Carter Field, noted capital correspondent, in a weekly letter, now gives the readers of this paper an intelligent understanding of what is going on in Washington.
